INTELLECTUAL DEVELOPMENT In Elementary and Middle School Children

At East Valley Christian School (EVCS), we believe that educating the whole child may enable the child to have a “better life” and enhance an opportunity for the child to become extraordinary. We believe the American culture is changing because of competition, choice, consumerism, and what has happened in people’s minds. The heart and soul of the faculty and staff at EVCS is to deliver on our promise to provide parents with the highest quality education we can to meet the needs of their children.

Stimulating Intellectual Development

Studies support the belief that a private school is better than a public school for developing critical thinking and study habits. Keeping children focused on learning is much needed in educational programs because of their uniqueness in terms of intellectual, social, emotional, and physical development. During this stage of life, young people experience more growth than any other time in their life except for infancy.

Is Your Child in the Right School?

Priorities and pressures guide parents to enroll their children in academic and enrichment activities. Academic and extra-curricular activities enable children to secure and hone the skills, character, and qualities needed to distinguish them when future opportunities present. The unique blend of study elements stretches our students intellectually, socially, and emotionally in a rich climate of cultural diversity.

Children educated and cared for in environments that foster their growth empower them to reach the fullness of their potential. We cultivate a child’s desire for learning and teach them that learning is an exciting lifelong process. We also focus on the children’s communication and critical thinking skills, which are essential for a productive life.

Are You Looking to Improve your Child’s Academic Performance?

Our goal is to build on the foundation the children have developed in kindergarten. Because children initially learn to read when they get older they read to learn. Improving your child’s reading, writing, spelling, and math computation skills within the language arts, mathematics, social studies, science, religion and the arts disciplines are key to future success. While intellectual ability is needed, valued, and expected an individual’s moral judgment, behavior, and community citizenship are equally important.
