Hutchison Recognized by Director of FMCS Presents at Annual Conference

Washington, DC - Mr. Cameron Hutchison, president and founder of Hutchison Group, was invited by FMCS Director, Arthur F. Rosenfeld to present at their annual conference in San Antonio, Texas. During his presentation Mr. Hutchison shared his views and experiences as to how union leaders and company management can work together as partners to help improve business performance and in the process strengthen job security for employees.

“In today’s competitive market place it is essential that management and union leadership work closely together. In these challenging times we can not longer afford to get stuck defending old models, rather we must recognize and adapt to our new environments and be prepared to change quickly when needed. But just as union members must be open to change, management must demonstrate a compassion and understanding of how these changes might affect the workforce and their families. Open communications, trust and mutual respect are key elements for a successful and productive relationship”, said Mr. Hutchison.

Director Rosenfeld recognized Mr. Hutchison for his participation and innovations in the field of labor relations, “In these difficult times for collective bargaining it was extremely valuable for my staff to hear your views on the tough issues facing the unionized sector. Your presentation was very well received and the feedback was excellent. It was a privilege to hear your remarks and I am grateful that you took time to participate in our conference. Again, many thanks for your valuable contribution and I look forward to working with you again in the future.”.

Established in 1996, Hutchison Group works with management, union leaders and employees to improve communications, productivity and business performance. We offer a broad range of labor relations services and are recognized for our ability to negotiate competitive “win-win” labor agreements.
