The tone of the lumber market changed on Wednesday as a trading level was found on SYP narrows and lumber futures reversed course. Canfor announced significant mill curtailments for the month of August in SPF, helping fuel the futures increase. Time will tell if the futures response holds and translates to the open market. There were deals done at steep discounts to start the week, but some of those are gone for now. Conversely, panels continue to fall faster than (just the) tip of Jeff Bezos rocket, with double and triple digit decreases the norm. Fires in the west continue to be of concern as smoke carries all the way to the East Coast.
