ADOPT-AN-OBJECT AT THE
LOVELAND MUSEUM/GALLERY

SAVING HISTORY FOR THE FUTURE

Frequent visitors to the Loveland Museum/Gallery may occasionally notice that a favorite object has been removed from exhibit. This may be because the object has become too fragile and is in danger of falling apart. Often the damage can be repaired by a conservator, someone who is in charge of maintaining or restoring valuable artifacts.

There is never a lack of historic materials needing a conservator's attention. Many conditions, both natural and man-made, cause things to age and deteriorate. Light, extremes of humidity and temperature, insects, pollutants and neglect can quicken the breakdown of materials.

Saving Objects Saving History examines the deterioration of some of the Museum's most valued objects, and explains the conservation needed to ensure these artifacts will be available for future generations.

Saving Objects Saving History also introduces an opportunity for you to help preserve some of these valuable objects for future generations. Simply complete the form on the reverse side and return it to the Loveland Museum/Gallery. Each adopter will receive an adoption packet, which contains a photo of the chosen object, a complete description of the object and its needed repairs, and an adoption certificate.

Your generous, tax-deductible donation will allow the continued conservation of important historical objects. Object adoptions also make great holiday gifts!
