This course aims educate lending professional on the differences in lending to the military communities by training them on the unique lifestyle circumstances often typical in the military.

The course and certification also helps lending professionals make sense of the military's "language," ranking and pay system, all major factors in determining how much a military member can afford to borrow.

"We are the only national organization offering this type of training," said Peter Giusti, president of USA Cares."It's important for the lending community to understand to serve our nation's military with the highest standard. They can't do that unless they understand the military's world and language."
